ELECTRICAL MACHINES LAB

The purpose of this laboratory is to make the students familiar with different types of Electrical machines, such as motor, generator, transformer etc. Students perform different experiments like speed control of DC motor, testing of AC and DC machines and learn about different characteristics of DC machine and AC machines.

CIRCUITS AND DEVICES LAB

At the end of this lab, students will be able to assemble a circuit on a breadboard with resistors, diodes, and power supplies; measure voltages, currents, resistances, and capacitances using multimeters, and verify ohm's law, KCL, KVL, and series and parallel resistances. Also the students will be able to calculate, using various theorems, and measure the currents and voltages in a resistive network, demonstrate the equivalence between the resistive network and its Thevenin circuit and examine the differences between theoretical and experimental values.

ELECTRONIC AND DEVICE LAB

At the end of this lab, students will be able to construct common emitter and emitter follower circuits and to measure, plot, analyze, and interpret the terminal currents and output characteristics. And also students will be able to construct MOS inverter circuits and to measure, plot, analyze, and interpret the output characteristics.

LAB FACILITIES

LINEAR DIGITAL INTEGRATED CIRCUITS LAB

In this lab, students will be able to build inverting, non-inverting, and summing op-amp amplifiers and to conduct general analysis and measurements using an oscilloscope and a function generator. At the end of this lab, students will be able to construct voltage comparator and precision rectifier circuits using op amps and to perform general measurements of the circuits using an oscilloscope and a function generator.

CONTROL AND INSTRUMENTATION LAB

To conduct experiments that complements better understanding of theory. To expose students to the various transducers, measuring and control instruments. To give training on capturing various physical quantities and to expose students on simulation tools like LAB VIEW and MATLAB

POWER ELECTRONICS LAB

Power Electronics laboratory is fully equipped with advanced power electronics devices, to enhance the students knowledge. All the analog experiments have been digitalized.

Converters: All thyristorised converters like rectifiers, inverters, choppers, regulators and cyclo-converters have been realized using advanced trainers kits. The outputs of these experiments are visualized using digital oscilloscopes.

Drivers are the need of the hour for industrial and commercial purposes. Students are being trained for the speed control of various drives using power electronics converters.

Simulation softwares like MATLAB, PSPICE, and PSCAD are being utilized for analyzing various circuits.

LAB FACILITIES

MICROPROCESSOR LAB

This lab imparts better understanding of theory. The lab exposes students to the various range of low end to high end microprocessors that are available in the market. The lab also gives intensive training in writing assembly level program in the microprocessor kit for various applications. The lab trains the students on the usage of microprocessor, microcontroller, assembler and simulator.

DIGITAL SIMULATION LAB

Digital simulation lab is a class of computer simulation programs that focus on the operation of electrical power system. These computer programs are used in a wide range of planning and operation situations including (long term generation, transmission expansion planning, short term analysis and forecasting) By using technical tools (software) to promote the students life style and optimize the solutions of electrical problems.
